Guarded by the Bureau of International Genie Curse Security (BOIGCS), § 234 of the Civil Code for Mythical Creatures (CCMC) states as follows: "If not freed by a human species and granting them three wishes, a Genie shall always be sealed into a qualified vessel [§ 123 adjusted legislation for Genie containers in the 21st century]. The bond with the vessel shall be valid until infinity."

This final clause reflects the situation of most Genies in our current society. Maybe that wouldn't be such a structural problem, if it weren't for us everyday people, who completely forget about the Genies. Yes, your eyes are not fooling you: Genies still live everywhere. Look around you. All your familiar objects – especially the ones languishing in your old shelf – could potentially accommodate a Genie.

Your Granny's old teapot she only dusts off to use at milestone birthday parties. The lava lamp you owned as a child, but broke because you wanted to taste the melted green jellybean inside it. And even the ugly multicolored fairy lights your neighbors punctually dig out in the middle of November to decorate their home into a thundering lighthouse.

Inside of every object might live a neglected Genie that didn't see daylight for centuries. But no need to feel guilty just yet – you can do better now! Support Nur, a free-willed genie spirit, through their journey of escaping their curse. With your guidance, they can overcome the obstacles of their enchanted prisons – disguised as harmless everyday objects.

These vessels are known to dimmish the celestial power of the genies they cage, only leaving them with a unique magical ability to keep them alive. Help Nur mastering these, excel in trials demanding precise timing and become one with the speed. Will you be able to free the genie from their lifelong bond with a vessel?
